Expensive, exotic, and very loud, these strange weapons could hail from a number of infernal planes. Most blackpowder weapons are characterized by the following traits: Presence DR14 to hit.

Ignores armor.

Most fire once then need reloading, which takes $d6+2$ rounds unless stated otherwise. You cannot reload with an enemy within melee range.

LOUD. Lesser creatures might roll Morale when a shot is fired. Anything more intelligent will notice and investigate.

BLACKPOWDER BOMB

3d4. Roll another damage die on the result of 1. Repeat. 50s

RIBAULDEQUIN

6d6. Uses 9 shots per load. Roll an attack against every target in front of you then divide damage by the total number of targets or 3, whichever's higher. Round up. $d4+3$ minutes to reload. Takes 2 inventory slots. 600s

CANNON

4d10. Must be rolled around using a pack animal (or very strong person). Action to aim, action to fire. Two separate characters can do each action on their turn. Deals d8 damage to the idiot standing directly behind it when fired. $d4+1$ minutes to reload. 1000s

Remember

If you can buy them,

so can everyone else.
